3 Pivot Brodda took the lead in the last race but gave it away. Followed well and might now be tested in the front and the two-year-old should have a good chance from there. 4 Global Holy Water was positive in her debut. The mare is probably improved now and she clearly has the speed to fight for victory. 7 Ballerina held strongly in the last race, finishing second. Nice horse who should not be underestimated. 2 Royaute Boko galloped early in the debut. Has a nice starting position and is one of several contenders who can win this race.

8 Aurelia Express has a difficult starting position, but is in fine form. The mare has tested the short distance on two occasions and shown 10-times in both races. Our pick. 4 Kit Crown is a quick starter and should be seen as the favorite for the lead. The filly has taken nine of her ten wins from the front and is the horse to beat from there. 2 Great Knowledge finished strongly in the last race and should be considered early from a good starting position. 1 Önas Rose will get a good trip. Competes barefoot and with an American bike.

9 Lotusorchide has done well at the end without winning. The form is clearly better than the latest results show and despite this handicap the mare should have the best chance to win this race. 8 Crazy Good I.D. has won two races in a row in nice style. Is strong and can do it tough. In the battle for victory. 13 High Five F. did not trot perfectly in the last race, but seemed to have some energy spared. Should not be overlooked. 4 Saint Zon won outright in the last race for the new trainer. Better with that run under his belt and will be a contender.
